Replacing the dollar bill with the dollar coin is an opinion shared across the political spectrum.

Voters see common ground when it comes to replacing the dollar bill with the dollar coin when informed of the GAO's savings estimate.

According to a recently-released Hart/POS survey:

▶ 70%
of voters favor replacing the dollar bill with the dollar coin when they learn the transition could save the government $4.4 billion over the next 30 years.

▶ 77%
of voters support suspending production of the penny.

of voters support suspending the penny when told of the savings generated by doing so.

“Canada’s replacement of the one-dollar bank note with a circulation coin, and later the introduction of the two-dollar coin, can be deemed a success...”

- Beverley Lepine, Chief Operating Officer, Royal Canadian Mint.

“There was a lot of emotional attachment to the banknote but quickly after the coin was introduced and the banknote withdrawn the public accepted the new coin. For the coin to succeed, the banknote has to be withdrawn.”

- Andrew Mills, Director of Circulating Coin Sales at The Royal Canadian Mint
